

The London correspondent of the Boston Atlas says:—

"The Athenaeum devotes nearly six columns to a caustic review of Miss Martineau's statement of a wonderful cure, which she says was accomplished by the means of Mesmeric influence. This influential, and at all times impartial, journal, says, 'let us admit the statement in its full force and integrity; and to what does it amount? Why, there is not, we sincerely believe, a scieptic or a scorner in the whole College of physicians, who would not agree that such phenomena, or like phenomena, or more extraordinary phenomena, are of every day occurrence. Yet just such as these, with a helping indignation and a halting reason, have served as a foundation to one-half the delusions that, from age to age, have troubled the past world.' The same journal goes on to say, 'not only is Miss Martineau an incompetent witness, but, as the case stands at present, on her own showing, it is impossible even for medical science to offer an opinion on the subject.' 'All that can be deduced from Miss Martineau's statement is, that she was ill—and is well, or thinks so; but there is not one title of evidence to lead even to the inference that she was cured (if cured) by 'mesmeric means,' or that mesmerism had anything to do with the matter.' 'Miss Martineau was mesmerised, felt better, is better—therefore, says Miss Martineau, 'I have been cured by mesmerism.' Why, this is Tenterden's sleight, over again! It is the established argument on which all quackery rests." In taking leave of the case, the Athenaeum thinks it presents so little that is peculiar to mesmerism, that the most earnest advocates of the science will not care to allude to it.

An account is also given of some extraordinary disclosures, said to have been made by Miss Martineau's servant girl. These are treated with the same dignified contempt as Miss Martineau's statement of her remarkable cure.

Mr Greenhow, the brother-in-law and professional attendant on Miss Martineau, has published a medical report of the case referred to. Mr Greenhow was always of opinion that the organ affected would get relief, and that his patient would be released from her long-continued confinement. The pith of the report can be given in few words:—"In the history of this case, it is probable that the advocates of mesmerism will find reasons and arguments in support of their opinions. But the experienced practitioner, carefully distinguishing the post hoc from the propter hoc, will have little difficulty in bringing the whole into harmony with the well-established laws of human physiology." "As regards the relief from the distressing nervous symptoms connected therewith, the time had arrived when a new and powerful stimulus only was required, to enable the enthusiastic mind of my patient to shake them off."

Miss Martineau's 'statement' has been a nine days' wonder! Every body read it, and was astonished; but, like a conjuror's tricks, when explained by a 'brother-in-law,' they appear so perfectly simple, that we are chagrined that we could not discover them ourselves!"

A TOUCHING STORY.

We find the following very affecting and romantic sketch published under the head of Police Reports, in the Baltimore Republican of Thursday evening.

Poverty.—A few days since, a poor, yet decently clad female, presented herself at one of our offices and requested the magistrate to send her to the Alms House. Her manner and language denoted that she had seen better days: and while she begged the officer to grant her last request, the tears in rapid course trickled down her furrowed cheeks, and her sobs choked her utterance as she tried to tell her mournful story. The officer, as in duty bound, asked her name, when she replied in a manner that brought the tears from the eyes of those sturdy minions of the law, whose hearts are necessarily steeled to pity and the finer feelings of the man.

"Ask me not my name," she cried, "let me hear in silence, and unknown, the fate an inscrutable Providence has meted out to me, but let not my aged parents, fond brothers and loving sisters, hear that I—that I have died the inmate of an Alms-House, and the recipient of public charity."

"I will grant your desire," the magistrate replied, "but if I knew more of your history and circumstances, I might probably do something better for you."

"I will tell what I dare tell, if you will believe that I speak the truth, and use your influence to obtain me some situation, in which I can but earn an honest living," was her impassioned answer.

The magistrate promised to do all he could for her and alleviate her situation as much as possible.

"May Heaven bless you sir!" she said, and told the following mournful and thrilling concatenation of suffering and perversity, commingled with sobs and the actual feelings of the woman.

"Two years ago, sir, I was happy and knew not what it was to want; my parents were rich, and owned one of the finest plantations in a Southern State; I was but young—not twenty, but I had my suitors, the sons of wealthy men, yet I loved them not—no one of the gaudy throng had as yet made an impression on my heart. There was in the neighborhood, a poor but manly youth, the teacher of our district school; he visited our house, and was treated with all the respect and attention that the other visitors received; and I—I, sir, fell in love with that man, and it was reciprocated. My father soon discovered the secret, and forbade him ever to cross his threshold again. Need I say, sir, we met clandestinely and were married: we fled and took up our residence in this city. My husband,—my William,—taught an academy for a livelihood, and for eighteen months we were happy, but then my husband was taken sick and he—died! Yes—oh God!—he died—and I was left all alone among strangers. I wrote to my parents, asked their forgiveness—but my letter was returned unopened."

My little means are exhausted, and I must starve, or—go to that refuge of poverty—the alms-house; but it will not last long, the sands of my life are nearly run out, and I look for a refuge from this world's miseries—in my grave!"

She ended, and every eye present was met with sympathy for her unhappy situation. One gentleman who was present, with that noble, generous, and manly feeling, characteristic of 'nature's noblemen,' came forward and offered her a home and asylum beneath his roof, which we need not add, was cheerfully and thankfully accepted, and she left the office with the prospect of better if not happier days before her.

Thus it is in this world, misfortune dare place her ruthless hands upon victims of every grade; and the sons and daughters of luxury sometimes drink of the bitter dregs of the cup of penury and misery!

MOUNT CÉSAR SEMINARY, & Swansey Academy.

THE SPRING TERM of this institution will commence on Wednesday, the 30th day of March next, to continue eleven weeks. The institution will be under the superintendence of Messrs. H. A. Pratt, and P. R. Kendall, Jr., associate Principals. The French Department, will be conducted by Miss Augusta Field, formerly teacher in one of the Public Schools in Boston—a lady of an accomplished education, and who enjoys a high reputation as a teacher. Also, Miss Maria Field, of the same place, a natural, and finished musician, and experienced Teacher, is employed as Instructress in Music. Mr. J. W. Knight, Teacher of Penmanship. The reputation sustained by the Principals, as thorough scholars, and their former standing as Teachers, as well as their Assistants, render the Trustees confident that the institution will be able, and efficient hands.

There is a new, and well selected apparatus connected with the institution, sufficiently extensive to illustrate the important principles of Philosophy, Chemistry, and Astronomy—Also, Electricity, and Galvanism; in connection with which, Lectures will be delivered before the School. Instruction will be given in Practical Surveying, Measurement of Heights and Distances, &c. The Classical Department, will receive a prominent share of attention, and every facility will be offered to young men, fitting for College, to secure a thorough, preparatory course. In fine, the exertions will be spared by the Teachers, to secure to the students, a thorough and rapid progress in the various branches pursued, aiming at all times, at an ample development, and correct discipline of the intellectual powers, by which, alone, the acquisition of knowledge is rendered of practical utility. Retired from the bustle and din of the business world—distant from all that would lead the youthful mind astray from the diligent pursuit of knowledge, or the path of virtue—here, the student may give himself up wholly, to the spirit of improvement, and prepare for future usefulness—and it is confidently hoped, that the public will continue to extend that liberal share of patronage to this institution, which it has thus far received.

While under the present administration, send your boys to school, and let your horse saw your wood.

Wanted Immediately,

A NUMBER OF MEN of good moral character and of active and enterprising habits, to engage as agents for the sale of Rand's Patent Right.

It being an improvement in the Horse Power for driving machinery, such as cross cut and circular saws, threshing machines, &c., and is a good substitute for water power, in driving machinery for shop work.

Said Machine has been tested and works well. The construction is simple, and not liable to get out of repair. One horse is sufficient for most kinds of work, but when the nature of the case requires, you may with equal advantage, increase the number to four. Persons of suitable qualifications will find in this both a useful and lucrative employment.

Applications, if by mail, should be post paid, and directed to me at Townshend, Windham County, Vermont.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

PUBLISHED QUARTERLY, on the first of January, April, July, and October, each number containing from two hundred and fifty to three hundred pages, beautifully printed on a clear type, and fine white paper, and furnished to subscribers at five dollars per annum.

The Publishers beg leave to call attention to a brief statement of the claims which the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW has upon the statesman, the literary and professional man, and the scholar, for consideration and support. This veteran Journal, the oldest quarterly in the United States, has done its part in representing the taste, science, and literature of the country for a period of nearly thirty years. Indeed, it is believed to be now the only quarterly publication in the country, which is devoted to science and general literature, and not trammelled by any connection with a party or sect. It was established in May, 1815, under the editorship of the late Wm. Tudor, and has been successively under the direction of Professor Channing, Judge Phillips, Mr. Sprague, the two Presidents of the University, and the present editor. A complete list of its contributors would fill a page—and embrace most of the names which are immediately suggested by the mention of American literature. The work has been remarkably fortunate in retaining the services of those who first created it, and established its reputation;—and in enlisting the aid of younger talent and fresh ability, as fast as the literary strength of the country has been developed. Among its founders and earliest supporters, who still frequently write for it, may be mentioned nearly all its former editors, and such persons as Judge Story, Mr. Whiston, W. H. Prescott, George Bancroft, John Pickens, Dr. Stuart of Andover, Mr. Peabody of Springfield, and his brother of Boston, and Mr. Norton of Cambridge. Among the younger men who have since come into the ranks, are Professors Felton, Longfellow, and Gray, of Cambridge; Mr. W. B. Rice, of Philadelphia; Mr. Sabine of Eastport, and Messrs. Hilliard, C. F. Adams, R. H. Dana, Jr., E. P. Whipple, and A. D. Gilman, of Boston. Certainly, no periodical, ever established in the country, can furnish a more respectable list of writers. This long list has become somewhat bulky of late—and some energetic essays, on general politics, have appeared in it—though questions belonging merely to the parties and sects of the day are still carefully avoided. The conservative tone of the Review has been strengthened, and it has waged war upon some of the destructive radicalisms of the day with considerable vigor and effect.

With what success the work has been conducted, it is for the public to judge. The editors have endeavored to impart to it a national character, to make it a means of fostering American literature, science, and art, and of explaining and defending American institutions. It is so considered abroad where it is frequently quoted in the principal journals and publications of the day, and made the subject of reference in Parliament and other legislative bodies. In England and other parts of Europe, it has had for a long time a considerable circulation. When the tone of the English quarterly, in respect to the institutions and the people of this country, was liberal and aboveboard, the Review undertook the task of repelling their assaults, and the able and spirited replies which appeared in it produced at least some effect in modifying the tenacious prejudice of these journals, and enlightening the opinions of Europeans respecting this country. The diplomacy of the United States, also, has been frequently discussed in the pages of the Review, and defended against the intemperate attacks of the partizans of foreign governments.

It is respectfully submitted, that a work of the character described above has some claims upon public patronage. An American periodical, supported by paid contributors, and not subject to the capriciousness of the magazines of European origin, which are appropriated by publishers in this country, without any remuneration to the authors. Thus the price of our journal may seem high when compared with the cheap reprints of the day; but it is considered that the Register, the Liberator, and other papers, which are paid two or three thousand for what is furnished to each subscriber for the small sum of five dollars, we trust this objection will be done away with.

It is made with some confidence to all persons who feel an interest in the growth of our rising literature and in the propagation of pure taste and correct principles, to support a journal which has already labored with some effect for the promotion of these ends, and which needs but little encouragement in order to attempt more in the same cause.

The work is promptly forwarded in strong wrappers to distant subscribers by mail, or otherwise, as they may direct.

Volumes commence in January and July of each year, at which time all subscriptions must commence.

The only successful Remedy for the Piles.

THE VEGETABLE PILE ELECTUARY, invented by Dr. Upham, a distinguished Physician of New York City, (196 Bowery,) is the only successful remedy for that distressing complaint, THE PILES.

Mark this: it is an INTERNAL REMEDY—not an external application—and will cure any case of Piles, either Bleeding or Blind, Internal or External; and probably the only thing that will. There is no mistake about it. It is a positive cure—speedy and permanent. It is also a convenient medicine to take, and improves the general health, in a remarkable manner. Pamphlets, containing testimonials of its efficacy, may be obtained of the Agents gratis.
